

Workshop - Meeting information needs: mapping information for reporting and impact assessment

Sarah Thomas, NIHR, and Beverley Sherbon, Researchfish

Extensive work by many individuals, from multiple organisations, over the last 10 years have contributed to the Researchfish common question set. The increasing use of the platform is testament to the value of a common reporting method. Organisations are now demonstrating how they are using the information they have gained through a wide variety of reporting formats.

This workshop will explore with participants the areas where the common question set meets our needs well, and will identify areas for future development. Participants will engage in small, mixed-stakeholder group discussion to identify areas they would like to be able gather information on in the future. The outcomes of these discussions will be shared with the wider group and inform future question set development.
